Here and There

Editorial By ALEX. H. WASHBURN

THE epic of the 20th century—Samuel Insull's flight to the far corners of the earth—nears the final chapter. Arrested in Turkey Monday he will be extradited to Chicago for trial on charges of juggling the books of his once-great utility empire.

U. S. Pictured by Japan as Bully in Arena of Far East

Nippon Seeks Peace, But With Honor, Says Fire-brand Matsuoka

THE BIG BOY, U. S. A.

Matsuoka Tells Simms America Has Got to Play Fair in Orient

This is the fifth and last of a series of articles on Japan written by William Philip Simms, famed war correspondent and foreign affairs expert, while on tour of the world for NEA Service.

By WILLIAM PHILIP SIMMS (Copyright, 1934, NEA Service, Inc.)

TOKIO—Uncle Sam's proclivity to play the "bully" in the Pacific, and the tendency of the United States, Russia and China to interplay, are imperiling peace of the Far East.

Such, in a paragraph, is the theme of one of the most outspoken utterances yet made by fiery Yasuoka Matsuoka, who, by his frank speech as Japan's chief delegate to Geneva during the Manchurian "war," earned for himself the picturesque sobriquet of "walking dynamite."

"I am afraid," he told me in the course of an evening at his home, "that some foreign-style home here, that there are misunderstandings on both sides of the Pacific. Let me speak frankly."

"On our side, Japan is irritated over America's insistence on playing the big boy's part in the East. At least, so it appears to us. We refuse to be bullied and resent any attempt at it. We want respect in return."

"We have consistently respected your sphere of influence and never once challenged the Monroe Doctrine. I want to ask you to respect Japan's Monroe Doctrine of the East."

"When I say Monroe Doctrine, I refer to the doctrine as expounded by Mr. Hughes and Mr. Kellogg, two of your former secretaries of state, who gave us to understand that the Monroe Doctrine, in the final analysis, rests upon the right of self-defense."

"Should America recognize and respect Japan's Monroe Doctrine of the East, many misgivings on our part will disappear."

"I trust America's aim is peace on the Pacific. But your thesis of peace forbids Japan even a sporting chance in fighting America."

"You propose to police the vast Pacific ocean by yourselves. At least that is our impression."

Cites Peril to Peace
"No powerful and self-respecting nation, however, would ever consent to be bound hand and foot by others. Just reverse the case: Would America allow herself to be so bound by Japan? I know the answer would be a definite 'No.'"

"America tries to impose upon us an inferior naval ratio and Japan resists it. Herein lurks a danger to peace."

"To avert this danger, America must revise her policy and must more clearly show an attitude of co-operation with Japan and Great Britain for maintenance of tranquility in the Pacific."

"Why must you act in such way as to impress upon others that you alone are to be trusted in the police duty of the Pacific?"

I had asked Mr. Matsuoka for his views on the 1935 naval conference. He did not hesitate to state them. "There is nothing of the 'incurable' Oriental of fiction about this twentieth century Samurai. Educated in America, his mind works like an Occidental's."

He is accustomed to speaking his piece, whether to his own people, to the staid dignitaries of the League of Nations, or to foreigners.

Equivoqueries never settle anything, he says. They only pile up mischief. Parley Must Succeed
"The 1935 conference," he continued earnestly, "must succeed. We can not afford to let it fail. If the conference ends in rupture, it will spell disaster for the world."

"But if we wish to insure its success, it is high time for us to set about improving the feelings and sentiments in both Japan and America toward each other."

"This is a most urgent necessity. It is the first and fundamental condition of success."

Nor should this be difficult, in Mr. Matsuoka's opinion. There is no material cause of conflict between the

Turkey to Return Insull to Chicago

Seized Aboard His Anchored Ship, He Is Held at Hotel

Fugitive Financier Dazed by Sudden Events in Turkish Capital

END OF HIS ROPE

American Has Made His Last Flight—to Face Trial at Chicago

ISTANBUL (Constantinople), Turkey—(AP)—Samuel Insull was arrested Monday at his hotel by the Turkish police.

He was taken into custody where he was already under virtual arrest since he has been under surveillance by the Turkish authorities.

His actual arrest was on instructions by the Turkish government, which acted at the request of the United States authorities.

To Be Returned to Chicago
ISTANBUL, Turkey—(AP)—Bewildered Samuel Insull, virtually a prisoner of the Turkish government, will be told Monday that he is to be turned over to American authorities for extradition.

A decision of the Turkish cabinet to hand him over was communicated Sunday night to the governor general of Istanbul, who will inform the former Chicago financier. After notification he will be placed under formal arrest.

Removed from the Greek freighter Maitotis, his refuge for the past 15 days, Insull heard a Turkish court declare that the offense of which he is accused is a "common crime," and was escorted to a room in a modest hotel Sunday night.

The final scenes in Insull's long fight to escape American authorities who seek him on embezzlement charges, flashed in quick succession. It was generally conceded that he had reached the end of his rope.

The Turkish cabinet, sitting at Ankara, the capital, wasted no time in making up its mind to grant a request from Washington for his extradition when word was flashed from Istanbul that the court had found Turkish law would uphold the action.

Insull's last request of the authorities was for permission to send telegrams. This was granted. Authorities ordered him left alone for the night in his hotel room, in the "old city" of Istanbul.

Insull, himself, did not know his own status when he left the court and was taken to the hotel.

"What is my legal position?" he asked.

"We cannot tell you anything until tomorrow," officials answered. Insull had asked to be allowed to return to the Maitotis, but this request was refused.

Puzzled by proceedings
Wearing a black suit and overcoat in court, Insull appeared puzzled at the proceedings and strongly protested his forced removal from his chartered ship in the harbor.

He asked for an English copy of the accusations against him, but only a French copy was available. The court interpreter explained that the document was the best he could do, since he knew English imperfectly.

The court proceedings were over in 15 minutes. The scene was a confused one. People gathered around the old man after the session, both congratulating and consoling him.

At his hotel, located near Sublime Porte, he was unable to speak French with the authorities and another interpreter had to be obtained. Insull asked to see the captain of the Maitotis and was informed that he would come to the hotel later.

Insull was then shown into a tiny room in the hotel and complained that it was too small. The management gave him the largest one they had.

"Can I have my luggage?" he asked. He was told that it would be sent up to him.

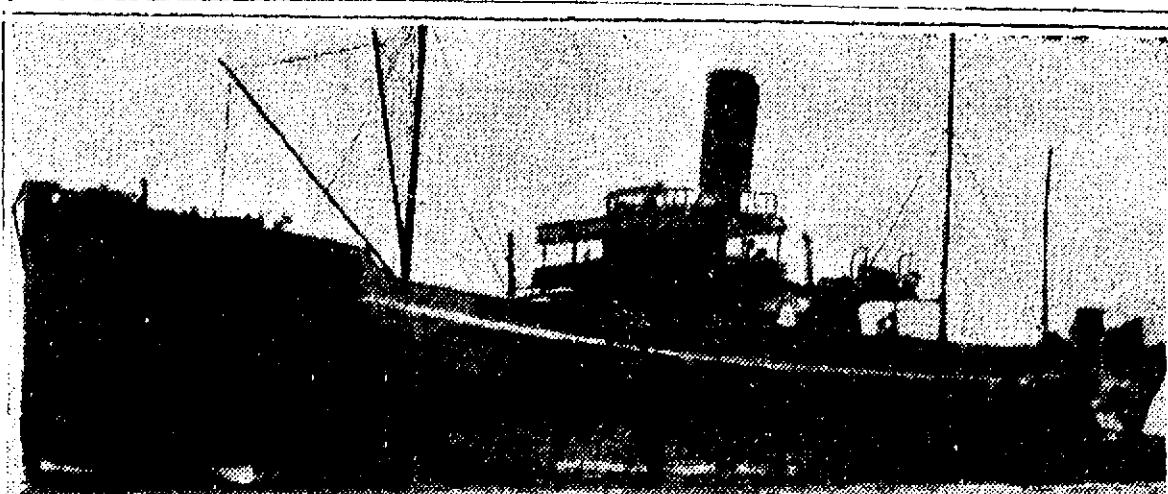

Officials explained that since he was a "guest" of the Turkish government, he could have anything he desired.

He told a British subject who was present that he had no lawyer in Istanbul but that he hoped to obtain one very soon.

After conclusion of the court hearing it was announced that Insull was free to leave the tribunal. There was some confusion as to the meaning of this but it was learned that he was not to be entirely free, but under surveillance.

All Loopholes Exhausted
Insull's vehement protests at being forced to leave the Maitotis (both he and his lawyers had said he would resist by force any effort to make him leave the vessel), coupled with his statement of intention to hire lawyers in Istanbul, were taken as indication that he still intended to fight

Recovery Program Can't Be Stopped

Sloan, Gen' Motors Head, Says It's Been Coming Since '32

NEW YORK—(AP)—The industrial recovery in the opinion of Alfred P. Sloan, Jr., president of General Motors, is now under way with "irresistible force."

In a report made public Monday Sloan dated the business upswing as beginning in the summer of 1932.

"There appeared then," he said, "indications of an improvement throughout the world, which improvement has been well augmented during the intervening time."

He added that recovery might be accelerated or retarded by governmental influences, but the general trend would transcend such factors.

Western Union Is Opposed to Code

But Postal Thinks It Would Be to Public's Interest

WASHINGTON—(AP)—R. B. White, president of Western Union, Monday challenged NRA's right to produce a code for the telegraph communications industry, while Howard L. Kern, representing the Postal Telegraph company, advocated this action "in the interests of the public."

While contending that his company would not benefit from the proposal, but added that "we are here to cooperate under the law."

Kern attacked trade practices in the industry, saying they are "adversely and injuriously affecting the interests of the public, of the companies themselves, and of the employees."

Kern said a code should be put into effect reducing hours of work from 48 to 40.

World War's Cost Would Have Paid for France 5 Times Over

And You Could Throw Belgium in for Good Measure in 400-Billion-Dollar Bill, Says Dr. Nicholas Murray Butler

NEW YORK.—(AP)—Expressing alarm at war talk and war clouds, Dr. Nicholas Murray Butler, president of Columbia university, prophesied Sunday that the world will end up in economic suicide unless the nations change their present course.

Comparing present trends with those which generated the World War, Dr. Butler pleaded for abandonment of "the outgrown and wicked system" of international competition in armaments and commerce.

"The world," he said, "must find minds and voices which can view world problems as a whole. International problems which are purely national have almost ceased to exist."

The president of Columbia made public these observations in his capacity as director of the division of intercourse and education of the Carnegie Endowment for International Peace. Dr. Butler is chairman of the endowment as well as chairman of the division.

Dr. Butler attempted to sketch in new terms a picture of the cost of the World War. He cited from the Congressional Record that the World War cost 30,000,000 lives and $400,000,000,000.

"With that money," he said, "we could have built a $2,500 house and furnished it with $1,000 worth of furniture, and placed it on five acres of land worth $100 an acre and given all this to each and every family in the United States, Canada, Australia, England, Wales, Ireland, Scotland, France, Belgium, Germany and Russia.

"After doing this there would have been enough money left to give to each city of 20,000 inhabitants and over in all the countries named a $5,000,000 library and a $10,000,000 university."

"And then out of the balance we could still have sufficient money to set aside a sum at 5 per cent interest, which would pay for all times to come a $1,000 yearly salary each for an army of 125,000 teachers, and in addition to this pay the same salary to each of an army of 125,000 nurses."

"And after having done all this, we could still have enough left out of 400 billion dollars to buy up all of France and Belgium, and everything of value that France and Belgium possess; that is, every French and Belgian farm, home, factory, church, railroad, street car—in fact, everything of value in those two countries in 1914."

"In other words, the price which the leaders and statesmen of the Entente, including the statesmen of the United States, made the people of the world pay for the victory over Germany, was equal to the value of five countries like France plus five countries like Belgium."

Suspect Murder, Two Held in L. R.

Man Found Dead in Ruins With His Throat Slashed

LITTLE ROCK—(AP)—Two men, one of them the son-in-law of the victim, was held for questioning Monday in the strange death of Arthur Swezey, 75.

Swezey's body, with numerous head wounds and the throat slashed presumably by a meat cleaver, was found in the ruins of his home after it burned Sunday night. Those held are:

Max Haustein, son-in-law, and John Shatzer, 25.

Body Is Slashed
LITTLE ROCK—With his throat hacked a dozen times by a meat cleaver, Arthur L. Swezey, aged 75, was burned to death Sunday night at his home, in a blaze that followed a terrific explosion.

Dr. Lawson C. Aday, coroner, said the jagged cuts on both sides of the throat and a blow over the forehead were hardly sufficient to have caused death, but probably would have produced unconsciousness. He said he believed Swezey died of burns or suffocation.

Following discovery of a short meat cleaver, stained with blood, in the front room where the victim slept, Dr. Aday instructed police to detain Swezey's son-in-law, Max Haustein, who lived at the same address, for questioning.

A rag had been wrapped tightly around the victim's throat. Firemen found the victim's throat. Firemen found the body on the floor in a corner opposite from his bed.

Haustein told police and the coroner he and his wife and their baby were asleep in the rear of the house when the explosion and fire occurred.

Police were looking for another man who witnesses told police, was in the back room with Haustein after the fire started. Haustein denied there was another man present.

Civil Cases Set for Tuesday in Hempstead Circuit Court

Grand Jury Recesses Monday Noon Until Tuesday, Without Reporting—Civil Settlements Opening Day

The second quarterly term of Hempstead circuit court convened Monday at Washington. The grand jury went into session at 9 o'clock and adjourned at noon until Tuesday morning. No report was made.

All civil cases originally set for Monday were settled out of court except one, James Styles vs. Fred Cawcenter, which was continued until the 7th term.

Civil cases will be heard the balance of this week. The criminal docket is scheduled for next Monday. Civil cases set for Tuesday are:

Homer Fuller vs. Sinclair Oil & Refining company. J. T. Matthews vs. Missouri Pacific railway company. Motor Finance company vs. C. A. Shipp. Mrs. Kate Knight vs. Metropolitan Life Insurance company.

Wednesday's docket: Norma Gean Williams vs. A. & P. store. Anna Bell Philbrick vs. Western Union.

Thursday's docket: C. H. Butler vs. Hope Auto company.

Two negro murder cases and the June Brashear bank robbery case are the principal trials scheduled on the criminal docket. The negroes charged with murder are Henry Muldrow and Robert McFadden. Their trials are scheduled for next Monday.

June Brashear is charged with the robbery of First National Bank here in February of last year. A previous trial resulted in a hung jury.

A $5,000 judgment for personal damages to Marion Hartsfield, 18, of Hope against her employer, Hope Basket company, was affirmed on appeal from Hempstead circuit court.

The girl's hand was injured while operating a basket machine.

Conciliator Raps Secretary Perkins

Resigning, C. C. Wood Says She Has "Fallen Down on Job"

BOSTON.—(AP)—Charles C. Wood, conciliator for the Federal Conciliation Service, widely known in the East, Middle West and South for his successful mediation of many important industrial disputes, Sunday announced his resignation in a sharply worded letter to Miss Frances Perkins, secretary of labor. Wood charged Miss Perkins with "having fallen down on the job," through failure to take the lead in reconciling industrial belligerents.

He accused her of having caused President Roosevelt and Gen. Hugh Johnson, National Recovery administrator, to "devote precious time to do the work which the Congress obligated you to perform."

In addition, Wood regarded as an authority on communistic activities and an important witness before the special committee of the House of Representatives which under the chairmanship of Hamilton Fish Jr., investigated activities of Communists in this country, added:

"You have permitted avowed enemies of our government, who are conducting an alleged labor organization affiliated with an un-American movement to enjoy the same privileges as those legally granted to labor unions affiliated with the American Federation of Labor * * * and others of like high standing."

Wood, a Democrat, praised President Roosevelt highly, and contrasting Miss Perkins with him, said: "He has gone forward amazingly. You have stood still; you have fallen down on the job. He and others are doing the work you were selected to do. I can no longer stay on and be loyal to a leader who does not lead."

Wood's resignation was accepted by the Federal Conciliation Service. He will be paid $10,000 a year for the next year.

R. B. Stanford and Jim Henry, Heads for Hempstead Co.

They Are Named Work Supervisor and County Administrator

For the past five weeks Mr. Stanford has been acting as field engineer, making tours of inspection of engineering work in 14 south Arkansas counties.

Another appointment made public Monday was that of Jim Henry. He has been named county administrator of the rehabilitation program under the emergency relief organization, which deals with federal aid to rural families.

Mr. Stanford and Mr. Henry will leave Tuesday for Little Rock to obtain details of the program.

Dillinger Shoots Way Out of Trap

Woman Companion Wounded in Escape at St. Paul, Minn.

ST. PAUL, Minn.—(AP)—John Dillinger, a submarine gun in his hands and a big green sedan awaiting him, shot his way out of a police trap Sunday and once more felled the law.

Finger prints left behind as he fled with a woman, believed wounded, and a man, presumably one of the members of his old gang, John Hamilton, definitely established, authorities said, that one of the trio was the widely hunted desperado who broke out of jail at Crown Point, Ind., last month.

Hamilton was identified through a description given police by Mrs. Daniel Coffey, wife of the proprietor of an apartment house, on the third floor of which the trio fought a wild gun battle with officers before escaping.

Behind them the fugitives left also a few spots of blood in the snow, evidence that a bullet fired by City Detective Henry Cummings had struck the woman, and a miniature arsenal, including two submachine guns and road maps of Minnesota, Wisconsin and Michigan.

BEHIND THE SCENES IN Washington

Sugar Growers Need Coaxing to Take $31,000,000 Gift... Lovely Congresswoman Is Forgiven for Bonus Vote... Hiram Johnson May Be Three-Party Choice.

BY RODNEY DUTCHER

NEA Washington Correspondent
WASHINGTON.—So insidious are the ways of the lobby and the propaganda machine that it took rather prodigious efforts to get the 80,000 sugar beet and cane farmers to accept a federal gift of $31,000,000.

Domestic sugar growers are the only farmers who have been guaranteed pre-war parity price for their crops.

Wheat and cotton growers enthusiastically accepted federal bounties without that guarantee. But when the administration sugar bill came along, the domestic sugar companies combined with other tariff-protected industries in an effort to beat it.

Senator Edward P. Costigan of Colorado—a beet-growing state—introduced the bill and was promptly submitted to extraordinary vilification. Costigan, as a senator, is one of the nation's rare strokes of good luck in politics. His word to the growers that the bill was in their best interests ordinarily would have been enough. But the lobbyists got busy at once.

Too much sugar is produced and tariff-free imports from the Philippines, Hawaii and Puerto Rico expand each year. The bill was aimed at stabilizing through restricted production quotas. The Tariff Commission has recommended a half-cent a pound cut in the duty on Cuban sugar, but the bill provides a processing tax designed to insure parity to the domestic growers just the same.

Secretary Wallace says the program means $63,000,000 to beet growers instead of a probable $34,800,000 without the program—and $15,900,000 to the cane growers instead of $13,500,000.

But the domestic quota was set at 1,450,000 tons instead of last year's record, price-breaking 1,750,000. And although that was the average for the last three years, sugar companies in the west demanded 1,750,000. They raised the cry that Costigan and the administration sought to destroy the industry.

It now seems the bill will go through with perhaps an increased domestic quota of 1,550,000 tons as favored by Costigan. But it took an amazing amount of statement, speech, letter-writing and other counter-propaganda before Costigan and Wallace convinced the farmers they should accept that $31,000,000.

Advance Forgiveness
Mrs. Isabella Greenway, the lovely congresswoman-at-large from Arizona, is more intimately connected with the Roosevelt than any other member. She turned against the administration when she voted for the veterans' cash bonus payment and other veteran measures, but she was forgiven beforehand.

Mrs. Greenway will not run for the Senate this year, but Budget Director Lew Douglas is secretly organizing a campaign to take the Democratic nomination away from Senator Henry F. Ashurst. Gen. Pelham D. Glassford the ex-Washington police chief of Bonus Army fame, is another probable Arizona senatorial candidate.

Three-Party Choice?
Don't let it surprise you if Senator Hiram Johnson was the Republican, Democratic and Progressive nominations in California's August primaries. He is registering as a Progressive, but will file in all three "contests."

California law requires that any candidate for election shall have won the nomination of the party in which he registered. Johnson's friends organized a one-man party for him, so he's sure of the Progressive nomination and can run in the election campaign in any event.

The Democrats, following word from the White House through National Chairman Jim Farley, are supporting Johnson. The Hoover Republicans have Johnson—who deserted Hoover for Roosevelt in 1932—but thus far haven't found a strong man to oppose him in the G. O. P. primary. Johnson, nominally a Republican, has consistently won that primary in past years.

If Johnson becomes assured of easy victory, he will be able to leave the state and campaign for other Republican progressives up for re-nomination and re-election—including Cutting of New Mexico and LaFollette of Wisconsin.

YOUR CHILDREN

By Olive Roberts Barton

Use Strategy to Sever Child's Relations With False Friends

Taking a child away from a false friend calls for tact and strategy, as Olive Roberts Barton points out in this article in her Child Training series.

When a mother takes the attitude that her children are always getting the worst end of it, it will react against them.

It soon gets to be known that Jimmy and Jean have some one to fight their battles. And as a rule this pair will be ashamed of it. Even though justified, and at times it most certainly is, they will be distressed about their mother calling up the teacher every week, or Dickie Jones' mother, or the gym instructor.

As a matter of fact, there aren't many such mothers. Most of us are careful of interference. And as a matter of fact, it is to the careful mother this article is addressed—the mother who leans over backwards not to interfere.

Hands Off Attitude
It has been drilled into parents now for some little time that they must keep hands off. They must let the children fight their own battles with their playmates, shake down to circumstances, and develop their social rights alone.

But I contend that the parent can do harm as well as good by keeping out of the picture entirely.

It won't be necessary to become a chronic kisser, or a front door dragon, to do a little quiet observing and learn a few facts about our children's friends, especially if for some unknown reason the boy or the girl seems to be unhappy.

To do it quietly is best. What we must avoid if possible is shaking his faith in other children. As it happens, it is often the friend he is most devoted to who is doing him the most harm and making him genuinely unhappy.

There is a type of child who demands a vassal, a shadow, a devoted slave. He (or she) will choose this satellite from among those who admire him.

I think this David and Jonathan friendship none too admirable. It works at times without much harm, but if the dominant one demands and accepts too much sacrifice from the other, it isn't fair.

The trouble is that the selfish child has the power to wound the other through his seduction and will do so very often, without mercy. If another child comes along who can be of more use at the moment, the faithful little shadow will be ditched without a thought. Then follows heart-break. His happy days will be those in which the king (or the queen) smiles. His miserable days, those in which he is ruthlessly cast aside when the slightest excuse offers. When he is needed again he is whisked back and goes running. The sun is out once more.

Breaking Friendship
It is a difficult situation, for it must be recognized that this false friend has grown real roots in the child's affection. To tear them out ruthlessly can have most cruel and unfortunate results. Such emotion cannot be blown up with dynamite. And besides, any criticism of his god may only fix his devotion more firmly.

To try by strategy to take his interest away is better. To fill his time busily and happily with vital new interests that will include another pleasant child and exclude the selfish one is a good plan. After a while the thing will settle itself, but for a while the tyrant may be disgruntled and mean—therefore to spare our boy or girl from another unpleasant reaction, diplomacy and deliberateness are very necessary. No one must suspect what we are about.

This One Is Loaded, Too

GLORIFYING YOURSELF

By Alicia Hart

It Requires Poise to Sit Gracefully

Sitting with legs crossed was an ill-bred gesture when Grandma was a girl. Both feet flat on the floor, with the heel of the right one touching the arch of the left was the rule. Nowadays, however, one has an alternative—for legs are crossed in society's best dragging rooms, the only sin being to cross them awkwardly.

Remember that legs never should be crossed below the knees, but always above, so that the large bone on the outside of one knee rests on the outside bone of the other leg. That way, the flesh around the knees isn't crowded into an ugly lump, spoiling the shape of your legs, and the upper leg swings free and gracefully with foot pointed downward.

Keeping the toes of the free foot pointed forward instead of allowing them to turn up unattractively is a matter of practice. When you're reading in your own room, be conscious of the position of your feet and legs. You'll get into the habit of holding them gracefully and, eventually, it will be perfectly natural for you. Just so, correct sitting posture will become inevitable if you try to maintain it when you're alone.

Don't slump over your book, letting weight rest directly on the base of the poor old spinal column. Instead, sit straight, hold the book at eye level and keep the chest up, chin high.

vealing, nevertheless.
It is a study in contrasts. The confused and rather pointless love affair of the baronet's daughter stands opposite the straightforward and healthy romance of her maid the self-indulgence of the lady of the house, who feels vaguely out of sorts and has breakfast in bed, is contrasted with the action of the cockney woman who goes out to get a job four weeks after having given birth to a baby.

And yet the book does not quite make the effect it might have made.

Back in 1918, a Minnesota congressman named Charles A. Lindbergh—whose son, a few years later, was to become the nation's greatest popular hero—wrote a book entitled "Young Country at War."

The government suppressed it, on the ground that it was not suitable reading matter for a nation at war. Now, Darrance is reprinting it, and it makes a strangely interesting document.

Congressman Lindbergh opposed the war, he felt that we were fighting for the financial big shots rather than for democracy. And—give him credit—he called the turn on the war debts, too, predicting that they never would be paid.

Yet it is hard to see why his book was suppressed. He simply said, in effect: "If we're making the world safe for democracy, let's begin at home, take the country away from the financiers and profiteers and give it back to the people."

He had ideas about how to do this, too. Let the government, he said, own and operate the banking system, the telegraph and telephone lines, and the transportation system.

"All transportation," he wrote, "should be as near to actual cost as it is possible to have it. That being the case, the government alone could handle it, and should do so."

It was this man's son, by the way, who recently went to Washington to protest that the government must keep its hands off the air transport system.

This instructive little book is priced at $1.75.

Blocking of Intestines Deeds Instant Cure

The length and complexity of your intestines are enough to cause considerable trouble, if they should become blocked, due to one of many causes.

Their walls include not only the surface, which secretes fluid and absorbs material, but also muscle layers and elastic coverings, which permit stretching and constriction.

In children, one of the most common causes of blocking of the bowel is the sudden drawing of one portion of the bowel into the portion above or below it. This is called scientifically an intussusception. Such an accident is due usually to some irregularity of the system which produces motion in the bowel and which is called peristalsis. You can get an idea of this process by turning the tip of a finger of a glove back into the lower portion.

Once this condition occurs, the baby to whom it has happened becomes a very sick child. The bowel becomes blocked, swollen, and congested; in fact, even of a vivid red color.

Unless something is done promptly to relieve the intussusception by straightening out the bowel, secondary inflammation and infection will occur and death will result.

One of the most interesting cases on record is that of a boy who developed the symptoms of intestinal strangulation, but did not submit to an operation. In this case the portion of the intestine that was drawn in gradually broke away, the walls healed, and 17 inches of the small intestine were passed out of the bowel in the usual manner.

This, however, might well be called one of the miracles of human physiology and it is certainly not safe for two countries. But, he warned, "mere absence of apparent cause for conflict does not, in itself, constitute a sufficient guarantee for peace."

America, he argued, is vastly richer than Japan. So she can afford to build many ships while Japan can ill afford to do so.

Thus, he reasoned, "If America tries to look for peace, she should stop building and Japan would do the same."

Parity Is Principle

"If, however, America continues to build—thereby incidentally betraying a suspicious mentality toward us—we will also build to the last cent of our purse."

"What about your contention for parity?" I asked.

"The Japanese contention for parity with America and Great Britain," he replied, "is a matter of principle. It should not alarm you at all."

"Have we not the right to claim it? Reverse the case again, and what would you say?"

"Do you foresee trouble with Russia?"

"There are some questions to be settled between Japan and the Soviet Union. I feel sure, however, that they are amenable to peaceful solution."

Danger in Soviet Schemes

"On the issue, however, of the subversive activities of the Soviet government in organizing a universal revolution of the proletariat and socializing China, Japan can permit of no compromise."

"Recently some of the Russians—taking advantage of American recognition—seem to be scheming to utilize America as a counterweight to Japan. But I believe your people have too much common sense to be made a cat's paw."

Should America, however, allow herself by any chance to be so involved as to create an unfortunate appearance of aligning herself with Russia against Japan, it will only aggravate the situation in the Far East and prejudice the peace ful settlement of questions between Japan and the U. S. S. R.

China's Chaos Is Menace

"What of Japan's China policy?"

"Much as I regret it, I am now obliged to say that, if left alone, China will continue to sink deeper and deeper into the mire of chaos and confusion."

"This hopeless condition constitutes a serious menace to Japan."

"China is altogether too gigantic a country for Japan alone to help restore to peace and order."

"Therefore, if America and other powers interested in China desire to extend co-operation there, we shall gladly respond to it."

But, he concluded, significantly, "My advice is that America should make it clear to the war lords and politicians of China the futility of their game to alienate and antagonize America and Japan."

Retracing his route, he found Wheeler dead and Murphy dying from gunshot wounds. They lay near their motorcycles. Their weapons had not been drawn. Apparently, he said, they were shot down as they drew up to the parked machine, which, meanwhile, had disappeared in the direction of Grapevine.

Nelson Funeral to Be Held at Ozan

Young Suicide Victim Will Be Brought Home on Tuesday

RALEIGH, N. C.—(AP)—Jean T. Nelson, 28, North Carolina State College history professor, was found dead Sunday of asphyxiation from carbon monoxide gas in his automobile parked in a wood near the Needham Broughton High School, Corner L. M. Waring pronounced the death suicide.

A rubber tube run from the exhaust pipe of the automobile to the inside of the coupe. The windows had been closed. Nelson's body was found with the hands firmly clenched about the tube. The motor of the car was running.

Nelson, whose home was in Ozan, Ark., had been a history professor at State College for five years. He held an A. B. degree from Hendrix College, an M. A. degree from Chicago University, and was working on his Ph. D. degree from Duke University.

A note was found at his rooming house. It requested that his family in Ozan be notified. The only explanation of his death found in the note was the statement "I'm a nervous wreck."

Excellent Student

CONWAY, Ark.—Jean T. Nelson, reported to have committed suicide at Raleigh, N. C., was a "better than average" student at Hendrix College, from which he was graduated with honors. It was said by a faculty member Sunday night. He took no part in athletics or other campus activities, being of an unusually studious disposition. After leaving Hendrix he attended the University of Chicago.

Card Dealer Held in Murder of Six

Bloody Clothes Clue to Horror in Washington Town

BREMERTON, Wash.—(AP)—A card dealer accused of taking a blood-stained suit to a tailor for cleaning was questioned Sunday by police seeking the slayer of six persons in the ransacked Frank Flieder home.

The dealer, described by authorities only as "Murphy," was taken into custody after Isadore Laschbin, Bremerton tailor, read of the killings. Laschbin said Murphy brought the suit to him last Friday—the day after the slaughter apparently occurred—with the explanation he had suffered a hemorrhage.

Flieder, 48-year-old retired Bremerton grocer, was gagged, shot through the base of the skull and beaten at most beyond recognition, together with his wife, 50; Eugene Chenevert, 38; his wife, Mrs. Peggy Chenevert, 30; Magnus Jordan, retired navy man; and Fred Balsom, a bar tender.

Shepherd D. L. Blankenship said the killer apparently bound and gagged the six persons and then set about ransacking the house in the belief the Flieders had valuables concealed.

Shenevert evidently worked loose, freed himself and started to battle the murderer.

"After killing him the slayer went mad and slaughtered all in the house," the sheriff said.

One of Chenevert's blood-stained hands clasped the leg of an upturned stool as if he had made one last convulsive effort to get to his feet.

A hammer and a blackjack, used in the beatings, were near the bodies. A butcher knife and carving knife also used in the murders were in the bedroom. Drawers had been pulled out in all bedrooms and the contents scattered on the floor.

Luke S. May, Seattle criminologist, joined Blankenship in the investigation at the home, located on Erland's Island, seven miles northwest of Bremerton.

Wooten Child to Recover of Injury

Hospital Reports Lewisville Youngster Improved Monday

Leon Wooten, 8, youngest son of Mr. and Mrs. J. P. Wooten of Lewisville, who was seriously injured Saturday morning when the wheels of a loaded wagon passed over him, was believed by physicians Monday at Josephine hospital to be recovering.

His heart and kidney were pushed out of place and one of his lungs had collapsed. He also suffered chest and abdomen injuries. The accident occurred near Spirit Lake, a few miles from Lewisville. The youth and several other persons were en route to the lake on a fishing trip.

The viewpoint seems to be that of a baronet's daughter enlightened, but still very much a baronet's daughter. Published by Little, Brown and Co., the book is priced at $2.50.

J. P. Beardsley Stricken at Little Rock Monday Morning

J. F. Beardsley, advertising manager of the Arkansas division of the Arkansas Natural Gas corporation, died suddenly of a heart attack at 3 o'clock Monday morning in his home in Little Rock. J. K. Sale, Hope manager for the gas company, was advised Monday morning.

Mr. Beardsley was one of the best known utility men in the state, having served for years with the old Little Rock Gas & Fuel Co. before its acquisition by Cities Service company at the time of purchase of the Arkansas Natural.

Consolidation of Counties Popular

Movement All Over America—Local Politicians Oppose It

CHICAGO.—(AP)—Hampered by local pride and political patronage, a movement to consolidate counties is struggling to make headway in a score of states.

The farm-to-city trend of population and the recovery of states of debt to tax delinquent land have caused tax burdens to rise in rural areas. These factors, plus increasing costs of government, have given vitality to campaigns for combining counties whose boundaries date back to the covered wagon area.

A survey showed this week-end that about a dozen legislatures recently considered bills to merge counties having natural economic, topographic, social and climatic characteristics.

Nebraska enacted a law making consolidations easy but it has not been taken advantage of. So did Virginia. The legislature in Wisconsin will have an opportunity next year to pass on a report by its Tax Committee which is conducting hearings along this line.

In Michigan, petitions are being circulated asking for a constitutional amendment to permit county consolidations for a vote in November.

Idaho amended its constitution in 1932 to permit it as an economy move.

Local pride and politicians' fears of destroying jobs and consequently their patronage, is blamed by sponsoring taxpayers organizations for the slow progress in this direction. They would realign county boundaries as to wealth, transportation, geography, sociology and similar factors.

Their crusade started in Tennessee 1½ years ago when James and Hamilton counties were joined. Only two years ago, Georgia plied three counties together, reducing its total from 161 to 159.

C. P. Newton, member of the Arkansas Corporation Commission, has proposed that the state's 75 counties be reinforced to coincide with boundaries of the 34 senatorial districts.

"Would you like tea, Marcia?" Estelle asked, hesitating the fraction of a second.

"No, sweet. I'd love one of those cocktails with 47 mean elements in them, though. Do you know what I mean?"

"I don't," Kerry will. He's a rather important person who does ask a lot of things, but I'll ask him to have it sent up."

Estelle rose, speaking, and Marcia moved to lay her hands on the girl's slender shoulders. "You really are sweet," she drawled coolly with a smile after a frank, slowly taken survey.

"I'm not," Estelle answered with conviction, "but it's lovely of you to say so, Marcia."

"We're going to have some good times together, child."

"I know I shall!"

"That's the spirit. Run along now, darling, and send me that cocktail—or two of them. I have a perfectly hellish head. The train was so stuffy and the boat worse. The most ghastly people to come to Cuba! Tours, tours! And there were Cubans who would try to flirt while using a toothpick. One can't always keep one's eyes shut and I hate eating all the while by myself, so there I was!"

Moving toward the door, Estelle laughed. "Sometimes it's a horrid trip," she agreed. "It was sweet of you to come!"

Waiting for the cocktail Marcia stepped out on the narrow balcony where vines hung loosely, duttering in the warm breeze. She could look down on a patio that was, in turn, dazzlingly bright and deeply shadowed. It was filled with every sort of bloom and foliage and smacked a bit of what Marcia called "Early Hollywood." Nevertheless it was effective. Her eyes grew languorously narrow as she looked down.

A FEW days with Marcia were enough to convince Estelle that the visit was no answer to her loneliness. Marcia was brutally frank in her conversation and her gossip was a sort far from agreeable to the girl.

"My dear," she would say. "He lived with her for years right under her wife's nose! Of course knowing his wife, you can't help but rather sympathize with him."

Besides, "live and let live is my motto. That's a sweet dress you have on, child!"

Frequently Marcia would watch Estelle narrowly as she talked thus bitterly or frankly. The child would have no peace. Marcia thought impatiently, until she had ceased dreaming and come to a blunt understanding of the world about her. Estelle seemed some times to be an incorrigible dreamer.

"Don't believe in anything and learn to take everything you can get," Marcia said sharply one noon. "The sooner you do, the better for you! The only people who know anything like happiness are those who are absolutely heartless."

"But I don't want to believe that!" Estelle protested.

"You'll have to, sooner or later. I know! I was like you once but I got over it. The only thing to do is to laugh at everything and cheat when you can get away with it. That's as close as anyone gets to happiness."

Estelle started to go downstairs. As she threaded the narrow balcony looking down on the great living room she saw her father below. He was not alone.

Suddenly the girl turned into her room, to stand there with hands against her hot cheeks.
